Notes

¹ Short (7- or 8-week) terms are intended for casual learners, professionals, students with full admission to the university, or as preparation for a long semester. It is not possible to exit the ELI or receive a UF English proficiency test waiver in a short semester.

² This date gives most applicants sufficient time to obtain a visa. The ELI reserves the right to close a term to applications at any time based on projected enrollment.

³ Estimates only. These payments are NOT made to the University of Florida, or the ELI.

*Special programs with customized start and end dates may be available for groups. See <http://www.eli.ufl.edu/firsttime/special.htm> for more information.

EXPLANATION OF DATES AND FEES

Terms: Long (13-15 week) terms are designed to match the academic calendar of degree-seeking students as much as possible. However, enrolled graduate students MUST follow the academic dates provided to them by their departments. Short (7- or 8-week) terms are intended for casual learners, professionals, students with full admission to the university, or as preparation for a long semester. It is not possible to exit the ELI or receive a UF English proficiency test waiver in a short semester.

Check-In and Placement Testing: All students are required to report to the ELI on the published check-in date. All students are required to take a placement test on the published date. All students are required to attend orientation activities between the check-in date and the start of classes. All students are required to begin attending classes on the published date. A $100 late arrival fee is charged to new and returning students who miss the check-in session without notifying the ELI in advance, or who check-in but do not attend the first week of classes. Students who miss the check-in session without notifying the ELI in advance may be dropped from the program. Students who check-in but do not attend the first day of classes may be dropped from the program.

Tuition: Tuition must be paid by the end of the third day of classes. Tuition includes full-time enrollment of 23 hours per week: 10 hours of Reading/Writing, 8 hours of Listening/Speaking, 5 hours of Grammar. Alternate courses such as Business English, Conversation Strategies, Grammar and Writing, and others are available when enrollment allows. Tuition does not include possible additional electives such as pronunciation, IELTS or TOEFL prep, advanced vocabulary, or others. Tuition also includes participation in the cultural immersion program and the services described below in “student support.” Part-time enrollment is not permitted on a student (F-1) visa.

Housing: This is the estimated costs of a student apartment. A student apartment includes a private bedroom and bathroom, but a shared kitchen and living area. Average figures include electricity, water, and parking. They do not include refundable security deposits ($750 average). Family or private housing is also available at a higher cost. Payment for housing is made directly to the student apartment complex, not to the University of Florida or the ELI.

Estimated Insurance, Books, Food and Personal Expenses: The University of Florida requires students to carry medical insurance. The cost of medical insurance varies in price from term to term depending on such factors as length of study and marital status. Medical insurance for a single student is about $160 per month. Students who can provide proof of medical insurance matching the Florida requirements are not required to purchase additional insurance. The cost of books changes depending upon a student’s levels, but average about $250 per term. Estimated food costs are based upon students purchasing an “open access” meal plan at UF. Most students choose to prepare food in their apartments which is less expensive. Payments for insurance, books, food, and personal expenses are made directly to the providers, not to the University of Florida or the ELI.

Total Estimated Costs per Term: These are the total estimated costs for the complete term of study. Students without outside support or scholarships must show proof of this amount in order to be eligible for a student visa.

STUDENT SUPPORT

Before you arrive: We will send you information about applying for a student (F-1) visa, information on housing and insurance options, and arrival information.

When you arrive: We will provide academic and cultural orientations, help with housing, and help with shopping for your new student apartment.

During the term: You will have immigration, cultural, and academic advisement, access to any of the 10 libraries on the University of Florida campus, access to many University of Florida athletic facilities, access to the University of Florida Student Health Care Center, and access to University of Florida computer labs.

Cultural Immersion Program: You will be able to participate in daily after-class sports and cultural activities (<http://www.eli.ufl.edu/programs/cip.htm>), and weekend trips. You will have the opportunity to sign up for volunteer opportunities in the community and the conversation partner program with UF students.
