Manners and Culture

Q: Why is the US a multicultural nation?
A: We’ve always been a nation of immigrants and therefore many cultures. From the start of American history, from the standpoint of European colonization, the American story is one of many different people coming here for many different reasons, including freedom from religious persecution, economic opportunity, and the sheer adventure of starting something new.

Q: How do people in the US visit other states other than by plane or car?
A: Well, those are the main ones. There is also the Greyhound Bus system, which can be the least expensive option (though it can also take the longest), and many of our larger cities are also linked by Amtrak train, particularly in the Northeastern US.
Q: Why do some Americans not like to say their age?

A: It’s on a list of taboo topics that involve money. We also dislike discussing money, weight, or even things like our grades in school.

Q: How does the government shutdown affect students at the ELI?

A: For international students, there is no direct impact. Consulates and SEVIS are both open. Depending how long the shutdown goes, it might have some unforeseen interruptions in other services.

Grammar

Q: Do I need a comma before a FANBOYS conjunction in all cases?

A: You need one in a compound sentence with a FANBOYS conjunction or in a series of 3 or more items, but not with only 2 items.

- I like to eat hamburgers, but my sister dislikes them.
- I eat a lot of hamburgers, yet I’m skinny.
- I like to eat hamburger, fries, and ice cream.
- I like to eat carrots and yogurt.

Q: What’s the difference between “who” and “whom”?

A: Technically, “who” is a subject pronoun and “whom” is an object pronoun. However, nowadays most speakers do not use “whom” at all, especially in spoken English. The only time it’s absolutely required in spoken English is if you put a preposition first. And most people don’t even do that!

- Who is speaking?
- Whom are you speaking with?
- To whom are you speaking?

Quote of the Week

You can make more friends in two months by becoming interested in other people than you can in two years by trying to get other people interested in you.
