Relax! Enjoy!

This coming weekend, Saturday, March 1st, there is no scheduled ELI trip. Just in case you aren't already aware of it, our Spring Break is next week! If you do not yet have any plans for Spring Break, we have some suggestions for you.

If you are staying in Gainesville, there are lots of cool things to do!

If you like being outdoors, check out:

- Matheson Museum

If you want to eat some local food, try:

Notes from the Office

Shaye: Shaye is the new Student Life Assistant. She is here to assist you and answer your questions. Say 'hi' when you see her!

Daylight Savings: Remember to set your clocks forward an hour before you go to bed on March 8th. If you forget, you'll be an hour late to class on Monday!

RTS: From March 1st to March 9th, RTS will have reduced city service for Spring Break. If you're staying in Gainesville, make sure to check the RTS website so you'll know when the bus is coming. www.go-rts.com

Talent Show: Sign up for group acts, videos, and the art show and start practicing over the break!

Manners and Culture

Q: What is the polite action when you first meet people?

A: Look them in the eyes and say, "It's nice to meet you." Older people will also shake hands but this isn't as common among younger Americans, especially in informal settings.

Q: What are the best words to welcome someone into your home?

A: "Helllllooooo!" Or you could just say "Welcome." If it's cold out, you can also say "Can I take your coat?"

Q: If I look at an American for more than 5 seconds, why do they say, "Hi, how you doing?"? I don't know them so maybe it's normal.

A: There might be two reasons for this: They are being polite and really saying hello. Or maybe because you are staring at them, they are being impolite and making you aware that you are staring at them. Try not to stare at people.

Grammar

Q: What's the difference between "most" and "almost"?

A: "Almost" is an adverb and "most" is an adjective. You cannot use "Almost" in front of a noun.

- Correct: All students speak English
- Correct: Most students ride the bus.
- Correct: Almost all students take grammar class.
- Incorrect: Almost students take grammar class.

Q: When do I use "little" and "few"?

A: As opposed to "a little" for noncount nouns and "a few" for count nouns, "little" and "few" emphasize that there is almost none or that there is much less of something than would normally be expected.

- I have a little money so I can go out but I can't do much.
- I have little money so I can't go out.

Q: What's the difference between "lots of" and "a lot of"?

A: Very little, actually. "Lots of" is a tiny bit less formal than "a lot of", but it's a very minor distinction. Both are preferable in spoken English to "much" or "many" in a positive statement.
